Keys to Effective Editing

Checklist—Copyediting Paragraphs

Short form

Check length.

- Divide long paragraphs.
- Develop short ones.

Read first sentence of each paragraph for topic sentences and flow.

- □ Add topic sentences.
- □ Check for unity.
- □ Revisit organization if necessary.
- □ Check for coherence.

Long form

Step / If	Then / If	Then
1) Assess the paragraph's length. In comparison with other surrounding paragraphs, is the paragraph significantly –
- longer	Does the paragraph contain a series of abbreviations, legal authorities, locations, names, citations, or other data?	Consider using a list or table.
	Does the paragraph include a natural transition, like a date, a sequence, or an addition?	Break the paragraph at that point and rewrite the topic sentence(s). AND Consider drafting an introductory paragraph and/or a forecasting statement.
- shorter	Does the content clearly overlap with that of a surrounding paragraph?	Combine the paragraphs. Work to make the sentences more concise or to find a more natural paragraph break.
2) Read the paragraph's
first (topic) sentence. <ul> <li>Does it NOT</li> <li>specifically and</li> <li>concisely summarize</li> <li>all of the paragraph's</li> <li>ideas?</li> </ul>	Revise the topic sentence. OR Move the unrelated material in the paragraph to another surrounding paragraph. OR Pull out the unrelated material and craft a new paragraph.

<ul> <li>Does it NOT clearly transition from the previous paragraph?</li> </ul>	Revise the topic sentence.
3) Does the paragraph lack focus, seeming to cover several possibly unrelated topics.	Craft a topic sentence. OR
	Outline the main ideas and either move them elsewhere or develop them more fully.
4) Assess the paragraph's logic.
<ul> <li>Does the paragraph lack a logical structure?</li> </ul>	Use the organizational strategies and diagrams to create one.
<ul> <li>Is the paragraph's logic NOT clearly conveyed?</li> </ul>	Add transitions
